6.1.2 Institution practices decentralization and participative management

Response:

The college uses decentralization and participatory administration because it respects democratic traditions and believes in group leadership. The significant delegation of authority to the college faculty is one way in which this approach is particularly reflected. Participation of all teachers in the management process: The Principal is responsible for supervising the Faculty members' lesson plans. Routine in-chargeis allowed to change the routine as they stay fit. They frequently take the initiative to plan for seminars, workshops, career counseling sessions, corrective actions, and exercises in the college. Trips and excursions organized by the College. They are free to implement novel and imaginative strategies for the benefit of their students. The list of characteristics that make up participatory management provided above quite convincingly points to the institution's core values, which guide every aspect of how it operates.
